

About the Editors

Marilyn D. McShane

*Professor of Criminal Justice,
University of Houston–Downtown
Director, Community Justice Institute
Ph.D. (1985) Sam Houston State University*

Specialization: Institutional and community corrections, child abuse, criminal justice system management, and criminological theory

Dr. McShane is currently working in research and faculty development at the University of Houston–Downtown. For her previous work at California State University, San Bernardino’s School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, she received the 1994 Faculty Professional Development Award. She was also Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice at Northern Arizona University. Dr. McShane has served on a number of national criminal justice professional organization boards and often consults for the National Institute of Justice. Professor McShane has a consistent record of publication and grantsmanship (more than 50 books and articles, and many grants). Her editorial work includes a series for LFB Scholarly Publishing, featuring the most recent and notable dissertations in the field, and the award-winning Encyclopedia of American Prisons (1996), both of which she coedited. Her most recent book is the third edition of Criminological Theory (1999), coauthored with Frank P. Williams III.

Franklin P. Williams III

*Professor of Juvenile Justice, Prairie View A&M University
Coordinator, Juvenile Justice Doctoral Program
Professor Emeritus, California State University, San Bernardino
Ph.D. (1976) Florida State University*

Specialization: Criminological theory, corrections, fear of crime, drug abuse, methodology, and statistics

Dr. Williams has taught at departments in five universities and has published a substantial number of articles, research monographs and government reports, and books. He has served as Department Chair (California State University at San Bernardino) and Assistant Director for Research (Sam Houston State University) and has directed numerous research projects and two centers. He has served on the boards of national scholarly organizations, chaired a major division of a national organization, and chaired or served on numerous national and regional committees. He has been an editor or associate editor for several journals and publisher’s book and monograph series. He is currently serving as coeditor of two book series and is beginning work on the fourth edition of a popular theory textbook. His most recent book is Imagining Criminology (1999).